The Charter of the United Nations is a document which sets out the principles and purposes of the United Nations and the functions of its organs. It was adopted by the United Nations Conference on International Organization in San Francisco on 24 October 1945. The Charter is the legal basis for the United Nations and its organs. It is a treaty which has been ratified by all the member states of the United Nations. The Charter is divided into four parts: the Preamble, the Principles and Purposes, the Organs, and the Final Provisions. The Preamble sets out the purposes of the United Nations, which are to maintain international peace and security, to develop friendly relations among nations, to promote economic and social cooperation, and to promote human rights. The Principles and Purposes section sets out the principles which guide the United Nations in its work. The Organs section sets out the functions of the various organs of the United Nations, including the General Assembly, the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council, the International Court of Justice, and the Secretariat. The Final Provisions section sets out the provisions for the entry into force of the Charter and for the amendment of the Charter.
